Shocking Wob documents about the corona crisis unearthed: 'What incredible scum is there in The Hague!'

(Wob = Government Information Act)
The corona crisis has been used for political purposes at the highest level, with a clear goal: to create an uncritical population. A remarkable instrument is used for this: mind control. Data investigators Wouter Aukema, Marc van der Vegt, Cees van den Bos and Daniël van der Tuin come to this conclusion after studying released Wob documents. Van der Tuin has published the research on Substack.

Shortly after the corona pandemic was declared, the so-called Interdepartmental Working Group on Disinformation was formed, which laid the foundation for countering unwanted opinions about government policy. In the Netherlands, a large number of government agencies are involved in mind control 'on a colossal scale' of citizens, the researchers say.

The working group, which includes a delegation from all ministries, falls under the responsibility of the Ministry of the Interior, according to the documents. Unwanted opinions are sabotaged through mind control 'on an unprecedented scale'. Notable techniques are used, such as undermining social media influencers by using fake accounts or banning people and video channels from social media.

staggering number

On the other hand, a number of figureheads had to propagate the government narratives. Specifically, Jaap van Dissel, Diederik Gommers and Ernst Kuipers are mentioned.

Not only all ministries, but also a staggering number of institutions, military units, intelligence services, universities, research agencies, health services, police forces and tech companies are involved in this massive operation, the Wob documents reveal.

An example: 300 Dutch IT companies are part of the TechTegenCorona (TechAgainstCorona) conglomerate, where academics, inventors and civil servants talk about censorship. In addition, intelligence services infiltrate closed groups on social media and the army spies on civilians and journalists. That gives the operation a military character. The services also have troll armies, the documents show. They are used to undermine messages on social media.

The government must step down immediately

“The government illegally gathers information from critical thinkers, tries to remove it and fight it with troll accounts that also threaten people. I am an expert by experience,” responds author and speaker Hans van Tellingen. “So: the government has done everything it can to only let their noise land with citizens and to eliminate counter-noises. That's called dictatorship. The government must resign immediately," adds entrepreneur Alexander Ket.

"I look at all those reactions from troll accounts in a very different way since that Wob request, which shows that all this is instigated by the government. You too?" asks philosopher and lawyer Raisa Blommestijn. Neurologist

Jan Bonte argues: "A government that spreads conscious disinformation itself, only to debunk it afterwards. Anything, anything to silence unwelcome opinions. What incredible gear there is in The Hague!"
