

The United Center is helping with food storage for a local food bank in Chicago

BarDown Staff

-
-

h/t Twitter/unitedcenter

Since the United Center, like other sports arenas all over, is currently out of use during the pandemic, the home of the Chicago Blackhawks and Bulls is being repurposed to support the community.

The arena is going to be used to assist the Greater Chicago Food Depository with food storage, storing almost 800,000 pounds of food. If you've ever wanted to see an ice rink full of non-perishable foods, buddy, now is your chance.